

Puerto Rico Guidelines for Drafting Work Accommodation Notes for Pregnant and Postpartum Patients

*These guidelines are applicable only in Puerto Rico.

Visit the Pregnant@Work website (www.pregnantatwork.org) for other states.

ACOG's Committee Opinion on Employment Considerations (#733) recommends that obstetric care providers assist their patients to obtain accommodations by writing appropriate notes to employers following these state-specific guidelines.

Attached as Appendix A is a sample work note that maximizes the likelihood your patient will receive the accommodation she needs to continue working.

Health care providers can play an important role in enabling patients to receive the accommodations they need to keep their jobs during pregnancy and following childbirth.

In most cases, the goal is to write a note that will assist your patient to receive the accommodation she needs to continue working and earning an income for the family she supports. Before you recommend that a pregnant patient take leave or adopt a reduced schedule, see "Caution: Recommending leave" under #6 below.

For patients requiring lactation accommodations (e.g., breaks and space for pumping breast milk), review our separate guidelines for writing effective lactation accommodation notes at the Pregnant@Work website's page for Helping Patients Seek Breastfeeding Accommodations.

An effective pregnancy or postpartum accommodation work note includes 7 components:

- 1. State that your patient is pregnant or postpartum. The Pregnancy Discrimination Act requires employers to accommodate other pregnant and postpartum women to the same extent as they accommodate other non-pregnant employees who have similar work limitations. To trigger the protections of this law, your patient must reveal that she is pregnant or recently gave birth.

What if my patient does not want to reveal her pregnancy to her employer? That is her choice, but she may be less likely to receive the accommodation she needs.

- 2. Identify your patient's medical condition(s) and the bodily system(s) impaired. Identifying this information in the note will demonstrate to your patient's employer that she has an impairment that constitutes a disability under the Americans with Disabilities Act, and therefore is entitled to an accommodation under that law.

See Appendix C for a list of medical conditions commonly associated with pregnancy. Examples include:

- Gestational Diabetes, an impairment of the endocrine system
- Sciatica/severe back pain, an impairment of the musculoskeletal system
- Migraine headaches, an impairment of the cardiovascular and nervous systems
- Recurrent urinary tract infections, an impairment of the genitourinary system

Tip: It is useful to identify a specific medical diagnosis and the bodily system it impairs, if possible. For example, state that your patient has been diagnosed with "hyperemesis gravidarum, an impairment of the digestive and reproductive systems,” instead of simply saying she has “morning sickness.”

What if my patient does not have an identifiable medical condition or does not want to disclose it for privacy reasons? You will increase the likelihood that your patient will receive an accommodation by identifying a specific medical condition in your note. If your patient does not want to disclose her diagnosis, you should ask your patient if she is comfortable disclosing the bodily systems the condition impairs. (E.g., instead of disclosing “depression and anxiety,” state that patient has “a medical condition that impairs the cardiovascular, immune, and brain systems.”) If your patient does not provide her employer documentation of her impairment, she will not be entitled to an accommodation under the Americans with Disabilities Act—although she may be entitled to an accommodation under another law or her employer’s policies. A sample work note that does not disclose any information about a medical condition is attached as Appendix B.

- 3. Identify major life activities that are substantially limited by your patient’s medical condition. This will demonstrate for the employer that your patient has an impairment covered by the Americans with Disabilities Act.

E.g., You may write: “XYZ medical condition substantially limits patient’s ability to [eat, sleep, bend, reach, stand, walk, lift, communicate, concentrate, think, perform manual tasks, care for herself, work, or any other life activity impaired].”

FYI: “Substantially limits” means substantially limits as compared to the rest of the general population before any ameliorative actions have been taken to treat the condition. Under the law, “substantially limits” is construed broadly.

- 4. Precisely identify your patient’s limitation(s). Identify exactly what your patient requires to work safely. Do not impose limitations that are not medically necessary, because if there is no accommodation available, your patient could be sent out on leave.

Examples of specific, clear limitations include:

- Is unable to stand for more than one hour without fifteen minutes of sitting
- Must eat snacks every two or three hours throughout the day
- May not lift more than 50 pounds more than three times per day
- Must consume water approximately every 10 minutes throughout the day
- May not be exposed to [specific toxin]
- May not be put at risk of being kicked in the stomach
- May not climb ladders

CAUTION: Avoid recommending limitations that are too vague or overly broad. For example, DO NOT recommend:

- “Light duty.” Instead, specify the maximum number of pounds the patient can safely lift, that she can only be on her feet X amount without a rest break, etc.

- “No stress.” This typically will cause a patient to lose her job. What employer can guarantee a stress-free job?
- “No physical activity.” Be more specific; few jobs require no physical activity at all.

5. Affirmatively state that your patient is able to continue working with a reasonable accommodation. Omit this step if you recommend full-time leave.

6. Recommend reasonable accommodation(s). Patients typically have a better chance of receiving the accommodations they need if their health care provider identifies them.

- A reasonable accommodation is any change in the work environment or in the way a job is customarily done that would address the employee’s limitations related to pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions, without imposing an undue difficulty or expense on her employer. Speak with your patient about what may be possible at her workplace.
- What if you don’t know enough about your patient’s workplace to recommend an accommodation? So long as you clearly explain the patient’s limitations (#4 above), you are not required to recommend a specific accommodation. If you do recommend an accommodation, it is important to be as specific and clear as possible in making your recommendation.
- Caution: Recommending leave. Puerto Rico law¹ requires employers to give pregnant workers paid leave for 8 weeks. The leave is to be taken 4 weeks before and 4 weeks after childbirth, but a worker may opt to take only one week of prenatal leave and use the remaining 7 weeks after childbirth if she submits a medical certification to her employer showing she is able to work up to one week before childbirth.² Federal law may provide additional unpaid leave.³ Before recommending leave, health care providers should take into consideration the type of work performed by their pregnant patient. Your patient should consider two factors before taking leave. First, leave, taken early (before the paid prenatal leave period), is often unpaid. Though, your patient may be eligible for partial income replacement through Puerto Rico’s temporary disability benefits program.⁴ Second, most employees have limited leave time. If your patient exhausts her leave before she is able to return to work, she may be fired.

² If the birth occurs before the pregnant worker begins her prenatal leave (or before it has elapsed), they may choose to extend the postnatal leave for a period of time equal to that which they were unable to use. The worker may request to be reinstated after 2 weeks of postnatal leave (and waive the remainder of their leave) if they provide a note from their health care provider certifying their ability to work. 29 L.P.R.A § 467.

⁴ For information on Puerto Rico’s Programa del Seguro por Incapacidad No Ocupacional Temporal (SINOT), visit <https://www.trabajo.pr.gov/sinot.asp>.

- During Pregnancy: Before recommending that your patient take leave during pregnancy, consider that if she goes out early in her pregnancy, she may exhaust her leave and have very little left for the final weeks of pregnancy and following childbirth. Remember, Puerto Rico law provides limited paid prenatal and postnatal leave (8 weeks total). The federal FMLA provides limited unpaid leave for prenatal care, incapacity due to pregnancy, recovery from childbirth, and other serious health conditions related to pregnancy. Women who are not disabled by pregnancy may be entitled to leave under other laws or employer policies, but such leave is usually limited. You should discuss with your patient other accommodations that will allow her to continue working.
 - Postpartum: Your patient may be entitled to take leave following childbirth for recovery and bonding with her newborn. She may also be entitled to take leave for postpartum pregnancy-related conditions (e.g., depression or anxiety). Under Puerto Rico law, if a worker presents a note from a health care provider stating that they suffer from postnatal complications which prevent them from working, they may take an additional 12 weeks of leave after the initial 4 weeks of postnatal leave have elapsed.⁵ To learn about the laws that may provide your patient a right to take leave postpartum, visit the Babygate website.
- Caution: Recommending a reduced schedule: A woman whose health care provider recommends a reduced schedule (e.g., part time work) typically uses up her leave on a pro rata basis.
 - If your patient is fired for taking leave or unsure about her leave eligibility, advise her to contact WorkLife Law’s free legal hotline without delay (see below).

Appendix C to this document is a chart of typical pregnancy-related conditions and accommodations that may be appropriate in addressing them.

Examples of reasonable accommodations include:

- Acquisition of equipment for sitting
- More frequent or longer breaks
- Ability to periodically eat or drink water
- Periodic rest
- Time off for medical appointments
- Assistance with lifting or other manual labor
- Temporarily modified work duties
- Modified work schedules or telecommuting

⁵ 29 L.P.R.A § 467.

- 7. Provide expected duration of impairment and limitation. Inform the employer how long you expect the limitation to last. Say, for example, that the limitation began on the date of the letter and is expected to last for the duration of your patient's pregnancy, until she gives birth on her approximate due date. If the end date of the accommodation is uncertain, you may choose to list a date by which you will have reevaluated your patient – the date can be extended or changed in the future. If you say nothing at all about when a patient on leave can return to work, she may end up losing her job as a result.

When Recommending Leave: State the estimated commencement and termination dates of the leave, and that the leave duration is “reasonable, based on the patient’s physical condition and job requirements.”
